Dear residents, dear members of the Croatian Society of Radiology,

We are proud to inform you that since the EDiR was established in 2011, it has become consolidated as a certificate of excellence in general radiology and as a benchmark for international certification methods across Europe, not only in radiology but in all medical subspecialties.

Given the international recognition and high quality of the EDiR standards, it is going to become equivalent to the Croatian national Board examination by the end of 2019. The Croatian Society of Radiology would like its residents to have the opportunity to obtain a diploma which is acknowledged not only nationally but also at European and international level.

The EDiR is a one-day, computer-based examination; consisting of three 90-minute components (Multiple Response Questions, Short Cases and Clinically Oriented Reasoning Evaluation (CORE)).

EDiR is a standardised certification of excellence in general radiology, which is officially and fully endorsed by the European Union of Medical Specialists (UEMS) and the European Society of Radiology (ESR). It is based on the ESR's European Training Curriculum (ETC) and provides an objective test of knowledge for radiologists at the end of their training. The EDiR has become internationally an added value to the radiologists’ career and can be a differentiating factor when applying for a job or a fellowship.

For all these reasons, we would like to offer you the possibility of taking the EDiR at the upcoming ECR 2020 and facilitate that Croatian radiologists can add the EDiR value to their careers. Candidates would benefit of free registration to the European Congress of Radiology. The Croatian Society of Radiology will cover the EDiR examination registration fee for all Croatian candidates at ECR 2020. For more information, please contact diploma@myebr.org.

Yours faithfully,

Lorenzo Derchi
